1840-1893

Who was Pyotr Tchaikovsky?

Tchaikovsky was a Russian musician and composer. A composer is someone who writes music

He wrote music for different occasions including for ballets, operas and symphonies. A symphony is a long piece of music which is played by an Orchestra.

He is most famous for his three ballets: 'The Sleeping Beauty' 'Swan Lake' and 'The Nutcracker'.

He was the first Russian composer to be famous outside of his home country.

What was his life like?

Growing up in Russia, Tchaikovsky had a big family. He had four brothers and two sisters.

Both his parents were musical however his father worked as an engineer.

Tchaikovsky started playing the piano at the age of 5 and could play as well as his teacher in just three years!

At the time musicians were not very well thought of. Therefore, instead of continuing his musical study, Tchaikovsky was sent away to boarding school at the age of 10 so he could become a civil servant.

Being away from home at a young age made him very sad.

He started playing music again and was inspired to compose his own music after the tragic loss of his mother in 1854.

What was his life like?

He gave up his job as a civil servant in order to study music which led to him becoming a professor of music theory. It was then he was able to teach and compose music full time.

He had a very short marriage in 1877 to a lady called Antonina Miliukova. This ended very unhappily two and a half months later.

From this time until he died of Cholera in 1893 his popularity steadily rose and spread.

Though he kept in contact with many close friends and some of his family he never had any children himself.

After their separation he travelled around Europe composing new music. At this time his music was more popular in the West than in Russia. Though this changed in 1880 when Russians were encouraged to get along with the West more.

The Nutcracker
